ery one of us is committed to serving the client with the best resources and knowledge available on a daily basis. I love this business and I want the customers to have an experience that they will love as well."

Scott graduated from the University of Tennessee with a Masters of Accounting and then worked in commercial real estate in Nashville for 8 years before moving back to Knoxville in 2007 to learn the family business. The consummate 21st Century professional, Scott has the business leadership skill, marketing knowledge, and passion to keep Standard Kitchen & Bath on top for years to come.

"It's such an exciting time to be part of the Standard Kitchen & Bath team," Scott says. "This is a business that has served the community with the highest level of quality and customer care for a long time. Getting the chance to bring my knowledge and abilities to the table, in turn making this the ultimate kitchen & bath experience for customers, is a fantastic feeling. We have the people, the products and the facilities to continue to be a special part of this community.

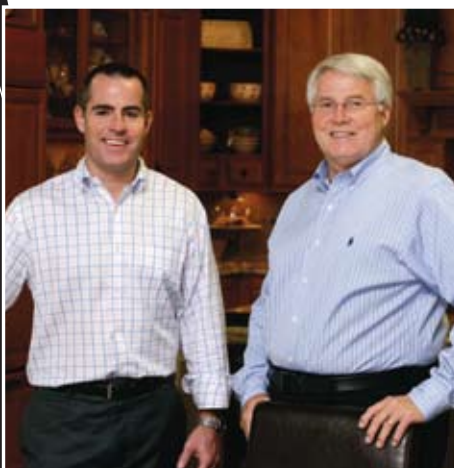

Standard Kitchen & Bath has one of the largest showrooms in Knoxville, which boasts Mouser as its primary line. Selling only cabinetry and hardware allows the staff to concentrate on the design of the kitchen and baths; while working side by side with appliance and plumbing specialists in the field to create beautiful and functional spaces. In the Custom Home Gallery, you can also get tips for carpet, tile, wood flooring, windows and doors, from Home Choice Windows & Flooring.

Still, the people are Standard's biggest asset. From the customer care to the value-oriented family behind it all, Standard Kitchen & Bath remains the location for custom design at a non-custom price.

STANDARD KITCHEN & BATH'S STRONG PAST has set up its clients for a bright (and beautiful) future. Owner Larry Fendley and his son Scott Fendley provide their customers and their business with the perfect combination of industry experience and the innovative energy that creates success. For customers, this means the ultimate kitchen & bath shopping experience with every necessary amenity from management integrity to choices of the latest styles. For Standard Kitchen & Bath, it means a continued unwavering commitment to industry education, product development and, most importantly, people. Owner and longtime cabinetry professional, Larry began his career with custom cabinetry in 1980. From the warehouse of a local lumberyard in 1972 to the owner of a thriving cabinet dealership, Larry has worked himself up the corporate ladder from sales to management to owner. And even though he has experience in every aspect of the business, Larry has never grown complacent. He continues to stay active in the industry and continually encourage his staff as well as himself to continue the learning process.

"I've been in the business for over 35 years and could sit back and say 'I know it all,'" says Larry. "But what makes this company special is that ev-
